

29 maart 2010
Olijfolies proeverij bij restaurant Artusi in Delft

Janneke Vreugdenhil,
Culinair Journalist

This presentation by the CNO was quite an eye opener to me. How little do we, as consumers, know about the provenance and quality of the olive oil we buy? I think the Olive Track project is an admirable step towards transparency in the olive oil trade, enhancing direct communication between producers and consumers. One can only hope that other EU olive oil producing countries will follow the Italian example.

- Intelligible introduction to the project
- Interesting tasting of high quality Italian olives oil
- Lovely diner, giving guest the opportunity to discover several types of olives oil in a gastronomic context
- A well and nice organized event

